PCN Facebook:

Well, I have postponed having a facebook account because I am not a real frequent facebook updater. However, this is a neat way for our group to connect with one another and share info. I originally set this up as a group underneath my personal facebook account but now find it better to separate it out with PCN's own account. If you originally joined that other group or wish to join now Click and join the PCN facebook account and do your thing.

Grandkids:

Currently I have 5 with one on the way. I am taking advantage of as much kid time as I can for things will be changing soon. Our Delta son will be moving to the MI area to fly out Detwa. That will cut down our gandkid time considerably. It has been great. Yesterday, my 3 year old grandson responded on the phone to me coming over by saying "that's cool!" In that same week I took my 5 year old granddaughter out shopping with me. Note: she didn't stop talking for the whole 2 hours we were together. In that flury of words she told me that she wanted to be both a princess and a ballerina. Although she heard that ballerinas have to put their foot over their head. With that said, she told me that maybe she will just be a princess instead. Kids say the darndest things and it is great to take a little time to listen and hear a something funny or a real gem.

Delta to Bring Call Center Jobs to U.S.

By Ted Reed 01/14/11 - 12:12 PM EST

ATLANTA (TheStreet) -- Delta (DAL) became the latest airline to say it will bring call center jobs back to the U.S. Delta Cargo will bring back work from a contract call center in Montego Bay, Jamaica, where customers can call to inquire about shipments of animals, CEO Richard Anderson said Thursday, on a recorded message for employees.

"One of the ways to mitigate the impact of the recession is to insource work," Anderson said. "It provides job protection and it is consistent with what the administration wants companies to do in the U.S. today, which is to bring back work from overseas and do our best to increase employment."

Forty contract employees had been taking Delta's animal-transport related calls at the MBJ call center in Montego Bay, but cross-training will enable employees in Atlanta and Minneapolis to handle the work, Delta said.

How much would you take not to fly?

Delta asking travelers to bid for voluntary bumping in effort to speed boarding process

Samantha Bomkamp, AP Airlines Writer, On Thursday January 13, 2011, 11:11 pm EST

NEW YORK (AP) -- How much would it take for you not to fly?

Name your price. That's what Delta is telling passengers at airport kiosks now, in case a flight is overbooked. The Atlanta airline asks passengers to enter a bid -- how much they would like to be offered if they were bumped.

There's no minimum bid; the maximum varies. Passengers can change their minds at the gate if they decide they don't have time to wait for the next flight.

Delta says the move is part of its larger strategy to expand its technology offerings. And the bidding prevents the "crowded and chaotic scene" that often ensues at the gate when a flight is oversold, spokesman Paul Skrbec said.

Often five or six passengers volunteer at the gate to take a voucher when a flight is overbooked, he said. That slows the boarding process and often makes planes late leaving the gate. On-time performance is a key measure of airline reliability. Delta Air Lines Inc. finished last in that category among major airlines in the most recent report from the Department of Transportation.

Delta considers order for up to 200 new planes

Delta Air Lines plans big plane order to replace up to 200 jets beginning in 2013

On Thursday January 13, 2011, 6:19 pm EST

ATLANTA (AP) -- Delta Air Lines Inc. is considering replacing as many as 200 of the older, smaller planes it uses for domestic flying.

The company told employees on an internal website that it's thinking about placing an order for 100 to 200 new planes, with an option for 200 more. Deliveries would begin in early 2013.

The company says the new planes would replace some DC-9s, Boeing 757s, and Airbus A320s. CEO Richard Anderson says that Delta pilots will fly the new planes, not feeder carriers.

Boeing Co. and Airbus are the main manufacturers who could meet such an order, although Chinese and Brazilian manufacturers are also planning new planes of the size Delta is looking for.

United Continental eyes new jets: analysts

By Christopher Hinton, MarketWatch

NEW YORK (MarketWatch) — While Delta Air Lines may be just the first major U.S. airline to spring for a new fleet of single-aisle jets, United Continental Holdings might not be far behind.

Key motivators for both airlines and, indeed, the entire industry are the stubborn rise in jet fuel prices and easier access to financing.

The recently-merged carrier has a fleet of grounded Boeing 737 jets that are on average 20 years old and lack the kind of fuel efficiency needed to weather oil prices if they were to again top $100 a barrel. It also flies aging Airbus A320 and A319 jets.

Michel Merluzeau, managing partner at consultancy G2 Solutions, foresees a United Continental (UAL 25.88, -0.08, -0.31%) order of about 100 aircraft.

American Expands Qantas Alliance to Build Overseas

By Mary Schlangenhein - Jan 14, 2011 5:28 PM ET

American Airlines' expansion of its cooperation with Qantas Airways Ltd. will build on its new international joint ventures across the Atlantic and Pacific, and allow it to carry more passengers from Australia through its biggest hub to other U.S. cities.

AMR Corp.'s American and Qantas will schedule and market flights between the U.S. and Australia and New Zealand and share ground-handling work and other airport services, the airlines said today. Qantas, Australia's biggest airline, will add a Sydney-Dallas-Fort Worth flight and place its airline code on connecting American service to 16 new destinations in the U.S. and Mexico, the carriers said.

The expanded cooperation builds on American's alliances with Japan Airlines Corp. and British Airways Plc that allow those carriers to jointly set schedules and fares. American and Qantas, partners in the Oneworld alliance, won't share revenue under their relationship and can't seek approval to jointly set fares because American doesn't serve Australia on its own.

The changes also may help American as it competes with Delta Air Lines Inc. for Australian passengers in the U.S. Delta and Virgin Blue Holdings Ltd., Australia's No. 2 carrier, are seeking U.S. Transportation Department approval for a joint venture to better coordinate flights and marketing efforts.

Subject: Final Delta Stock Distribution Question

Hi Mark,

Regarding the final distribution of stock to us unsecured claimholders (recently estimated to take place in March, 2011), it was my understanding that on Oct 15th, 2010 Delta filed a motion with the court to close the bankruptcy case, and that the judge was scheduled to hold a hearing on that motion in mid December. I don't recall anything specific about the result of that hearing - has anything been published about it?

Bill Phillips
MSY (Ret. Dec. 2004)

Editor: I have not heard or found a final distribution hard date. I believe DAL is working through its list of outstanding creditors and we are last or near last on that list. Kind of like being at the dinner table last at Ma and Pa Kettles. Only crumbs left! Please see following post by John.
